Dinner for Visitor.

Mrs. Alfred Bell Carter entertained at quite a pretty dinner party given at the Country Club on Saturday evening. The dinner was for fifteen guests, and the dinner table was arranged with a centerpiece of pink carnations and Gillian roses. The dinner was given in honor of Mrs. Carter's niece, Miss Gertrude Carter, of Louisville, Ky., who is spending several weeks here, and in whose honor a number of attractive functions have been planned.

Those present at Mrs. Carter's dinner were Miss Caldwell, Miss Gertrude Carter, Miss Fanny Scott, Miss Camilla Welford, Miss Mildred and Virginia Grice, Walter Leake, Stuart C. Leake, Colonel L. Lane Stern, George Reid, St. George, Lieutenant Wadsworth, United States Navy, and George Fitzhugh, Pretty Leachman.

Mrs. Alfred Witherspoon entertained at a very handsome buffet luncheon on Saturday from 1 to 2 o'clock at her country home near Westhampton. Some 200 guests were invited, and they included the married society set here. Mrs. Witherspoon who received in a blue satin gown draped in black chiffon, with a corsage bouquet of violets and gardenias, stood in the drawing room, which had been decorated in American Beauty roses. American Beauty roses were massed on the mantel, and tall silver vases of the same flowers were arranged about the room. In the dining room the luncheon table was set with an immense green basket filled with the palest yellow and white Marguerites and caught with a nosegay.

LORD GRANTLEY BUYS BEAUTIFUL ESTATE

Red Rice Familiar to Considerable Number of American People.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.

Lord Grantley, whose first wife was Katharine McVicker, daughter of Commodore W. H. McVicker, of the New York Yacht Club, has just purchased the beautiful Red Rice estate, near Andover, which for several years has been occupied by Ernest Cunard and his American wife, daughter of J. McPheters, of Baltimore, and former wife of Edward Padelford, of Washington, D. C.

Cunard is very hospitable. Red Rice is familiar to a considerable number of people from this side of the Atlantic, who have stayed there for week-end parties as their guests during the season, and also for the shooting, which is excellent there.

It formerly belonged to the Errington family, and during the reign of George III, when it was owned by George Errington, the uncle of Mrs. Fitzhugh, the latter often stayed there with her mother, the Princess Regent, afterwards George IV. The features of the park are the magnificent avenue of old beech trees, planted in the reign of Queen Anne by the Erringtons, and the life of the Erringtons of her day, in commemoration of the battle of Marston, in which several of the Erringtons took part.

Lord Grantley sold his ancestral home, Grantley Hall, near Ripon, a number of years ago to the late Lord Furness, for a very large sum of money. Since the death of the American Lady Grantley, he has married again, his present wife being a natural daughter of the late Viscountess Ranelagh. She was formerly the wife of Clement Martin Le Breton, the lawyer brother of Lady de Balte, better known as the Countess of Balte, who was married to Lord Grantley's son, Lord Grantley.

Curiously enough, Lord Grantley's first wife was also a divorcee. His marriage to her was in the nature of a romance. She had been previously married to his uncle, Major Charles Brinsley Norton, who was at that time the next heir to his nephew's peerage. Since the death of his wife, he had been in love with her, and she had eloped. The divorce was granted in due course against Mrs. Norton, and she became the wife of Lord Grantley. Twelve years later the late Lady Grantley presented her husband with a son and heir, whose appearance in the world destroyed the prospects of Major Norton, who had thus been deprived of not only his wife, but also of his chances of succeeding to the title and estates.

Lord Grantley is descended from Richard Norton, sheriff of Northumberland in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and the first Lord Grantley was Speaker of the House of Commons during the early years of the reign of George II. The present Lord Grantley was brought up almost altogether by his grandmother, Mrs. George Norton, the lovely and brilliant granddaughter of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, and she died as the wife of Sir William Stirling Maxwell, Bart., a knight of the Thistle, and member of the House of Commons.

Lord Grantley's mother was the heroine of the romance of Lord Melbourne's life—that Lord Melbourne who was the first Prime Minister, and member of Queen Victoria's household. Lord Grantley's father was a soldier, and he was killed in the Crimean War. Lord Grantley's mother was a very beautiful woman, and she was the daughter of a noble family.

Lord Grantley's father was a very successful soldier, and he was killed in the Crimean War. Lord Grantley's mother was a very beautiful woman, and she was the daughter of a noble family.

branches, a Catholic and a Protestant one. The two denominations, taking it in turn to elect the first and second provost of the order, who alternate. The order, while it is not a religious one, is extremely exclusive. It possesses a fine Gothic mansion at a fine dining room, and a large hall, the hall and another at the house. MAJOR FLOOD DESIGNS.

No Longer in Charge of Corn Demonstration in Appomattox.

Appomattox, Va., January 12.—Major J. W. Flood, who has had charge of the Corn Demonstration in this county since its beginning, has resigned his position after a successful year in corn growing. Major Flood has supervised the boys' corn club as well as the men's corn club, both of which have been eminently successful. Through a man of seventy-four years old, he has trained the corn growers of this county, and the farmers in making larger yields. Major Flood is the father of Congressman H. D. Flood.

The County School Board held its regular monthly meeting here Monday. The board visited the Agricultural School in a body with a view of creating suitable fire escapes. The board inspected the school, and were well pleased with the workings of it.

Miss Rosalie Lipscomb, Ph. B., of Richmond, has been selected to fill the unexpired term at the Agricultural High School made vacant by the resignation of Miss Mary Love Cobbs, who has accepted a position in the Maury High School of Norfolk.

The second series of attractions similar to the university extension work was given at the Agricultural High School Monday evening. The series was given by the editor of the London Times, Lord Herbert of Lea, who is the father of the present Earl of Pembroke, and one of his sons, the late Sir Michael Herbert, British ambassador at Washington, married a sister of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, of New York.

Lord Grantley was brought up by his grandmother rather than by his mother. It was because his relatives held that she would be better fitted for the task. For his mother was an Italian peasant woman and scarcely equipped from an intellectual and educational point of view. He was a high-spirited child, with a wild strain of Southern blood in his veins, for the rule of a hereditary legislator in the diplomatic service, and while serving under Sir William Temple at Naples, prior to his accession to the peerage, became infatuated with a young girl, who was a particularly lovely daughter of a well-to-do peasant at Capri.

The romance culminated in his resignation from the diplomatic service, in his conversion from a Protestant, who had until then affected a cold contempt for what he described as "Italian superstition" into a devout Roman Catholic and in his marriage to the girl. The marriage was a happy one, and the life of the peasant girl transplanted into English society was an altogether happy one. It would be idle to assert, in consequence of time Lady Grantley returned to her home in Capri, leaving her children with her mother-in-law. She was joined on the island by her husband, and he died there in the villa which he had built, and where his widow survived him for many years, a full-fledged peeress of the British realm, although garbed in the picturesque costume of the Capriote peasants and fishermen.

Lord Grantley has inherited the good looks of his comely father and his beautiful mother. He has a son of twenty, who will succeed to his honors and to his fortune, and four daughters, two of them twins. The son, Lord Grantley, is a young man of great promise, and he is a member of the House of Commons. He is a member of the House of Commons, and he is a member of the House of Commons.

SALE OF CATTLE ATTRACTS CROWD

Buyers at Catalpa Farm Entertained in Old-Time Style.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

Culpeper, Va., January 12.—A large sale of cattle and other farm stock, and all sorts of farm implements and household furniture belonging to F. C. Brown, who recently sold his farm near Catalpa, to Judge Lee Thomas, of Memphis, was held on the farm Wednesday, attracting hundreds of buyers from nearby, and neighboring counties. The sale was a very successful one, and the cattle sold at high prices, as did also some fine horses, and bidding was spirited. Hot coffee and lunch was served to the buyers in the old-time manner. Mr. and Mrs. Brown and family are now making their home in Culpeper.

An interesting lecture on liquid air was given in the auditorium of the Orange High School last evening by Prof. L. C. Hoxton, professor of physics in the University of Virginia. His lecture was interspersed with numerous illustrations demonstrating the properties of liquid air. The lecture was very interesting, and the audience was very large.

Dr. E. Lester Jones, the well-known horseman, who recently sold his Culpeper home, Monumental Mills, and is now living at Montpelier Station, has been elected secretary and treasurer of the American Foxhound Association.

General Lee's birthday, falling this year on Sunday, the celebration thereof will take place the following day in Manassas, under the auspices of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. Luncheon will be served at the celebration, and the exercises, consisting of addresses, campfire songs, and a musical program, will begin promptly at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Several distinguished speakers are expected to be present, among them Hon. E. Lee, Jr. in Culpeper, among them Hon. E. Lee, Jr. in Culpeper, among them Hon. E. Lee, Jr. in Culpeper.

The organization to be known as "The Manassas German Club" was organized in the Manassas German Club, and is now in the process of organizing. It is the purpose of this club to give seven Germans during the year, to be scheduled later.
